<https://www.stonybrook.edu/commcms/wicked-problem/about/What-is-a-wicked-problem>

What's a Wicked Problem?

In 1973, design theorists Horst Rittel and Melvin Webber introduced the term "wicked problem" in order to draw attention to the complexities and challenges of addressing planning and social policy problems. Unlike the "tame" problems of mathematics and chess, the wicked problems of planning lack clarity in both their aims and solutions. In addition to these challenges of articulation and internal logic, they are subject to real-world constraints that prevent multiple and risk-free attempts at solving. As described by Rittel and Webber, wicked problems have 10 important characteristics:

- 1) They do not have a definitive formulation.
- 2) They do not have a "stopping rule." In other words, these problems lack an inherent logic that signals when they are solved.
- 3) Their solutions are not true or false, only good or bad.
- 4) There is no way to test the solution to a wicked problem.
- 5) They cannot be studied through trial and error. Their solutions are irreversible so, as Rittel and Webber put it, "every trial counts."
- 6) There is no end to the number of solutions or approaches to a wicked problem.
- 7) All wicked problems are essentially unique.
- 8) Wicked problems can always be described as the symptom of other problems.
- 9) The way a wicked problem is described determines its possible solutions.
- 10) Planners, that is those who present solutions to these problems, have no right to be wrong. Unlike mathematicians, "planners are liable for the consequences of the solutions they generate;

the effects can matter a great deal to the people who are touched by those actions.”

<https://www.accord.org.za/ajcr-issues/the-nature-of-intractable-conflict-resolution-in-the-twenty-first-century/>

The term ‘intractable conflict’ is widely perceived as an impossible dilemma: a situation with which there is no positive outcome, no solution. These are the conflicts alleged to stubbornly elude resolution despite the use of popular conflict management techniques available. Intractable conflict, a vast area of concern, has often been characterised by the prolonged violent actions of state actors or communities in response to harmful social or cultural hardships. Redress and/or revenge are motivating factors. These conflicts have survived because of deep-rooted and complex attitudes, behaviours and situations which seem to be impenetrable to methods of resolution. Or are they? Christopher Mitchell in his book The nature of intractable conflict: Resolution in the twenty-first century, sets out to unpack the nature and behaviour of intractable conflicts of the twenty-first century. The book provides a detailed and intriguing overview of how certain conflicts became intractable, of the reasons for their prolonged survival and possible steps towards their termination. Over all, Mitchell attempts to provide a roadmap, not to lasting peace and security, but towards building a practical understanding of the theoretical issues and applicable techniques.

And what about Tik Tok that everyone should know about. Unconditionally, even if I go off the Grid on November 7th 2022 at 2:00 PM – To my freedom and peace from being a targeted individual of gangstalking for 16+ years that no one is willing to communicate with me. Property! You all cut and run and hide into a deep corner of your mind, and allow me to just suffer being victimized by a crime!

Documentation of the effects of Gangstalking appears at the National Institutes of Health [nih.gov] – but you will refuse to see that truth, in view, you pick the conspiracy of hate unprofessionally of your job. I want out!

This is a Wicked Problem that you all are responsible for creating – and you will not release your hate-involved conspiracy – this is provable beyond a reasonable doubt.

I no longer wish to remain in this country,. I do not care how many pages this fax is --- 1000 pages if necessary -- I WILL NOT SIT DOWN AND SHUT THE FUCK UP ABOUT THE TRUTH, THE WHOLE TRUTH, AND NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH.

Stop Watching TikTok's Cringe Videos Because TikTok Is Destroying Society

On YouTube Of Course

But I have a PLAYLIST shown in the attached document. This goes on and on and on without being addressed. Tik Tok should be taken away from the net. IT is a WEAPON OF CYBERWAR!

Full Transcript of this Video MUST Be Placed into this FAX - because you have insane incalculable apathy to care.

Transcript: [No Punctuation]

tick tock is the most vulgar vapid self-absorbed and dehumanizing social media sites in living memory it's a platform marketed to teenagers which incentivizes underage girls do i like burlesque dances and strip clubs for the viewing pleasure of sex crazed teenage boys and literal pedos this is why tic toc serves as a sewer pipe of projectile diarrhea aimed directly at our gorging mouths and with everyone in their dog trying to get as many views as possible tick tock has managed to gain a foothold in the psyche of tomorrow's young adults as andy warhol said in the future everyone will be world famous for 15 minutes so then the question is where the hell did this wave for tick tock downloads even come from why did the reddish ceo call tick tock fundamentally parasitic and why are governments around the world becoming so nervous about tick tock something else is going on it's no exaggeration when i say that tick-tock is damaging society which is a worrying fact when you consider the take talk is being downloaded at an exceptional rate garnering more downloads than facebook youtube or instagram and with this has come an unparalleled rise in the e thoughts i mean the majority of posts on the site look like underage girls either showing off their bodies or being explicitly sexual for example just look at the tick tockers such as charlie's emilio a 16 year old girl who does nothing but shake her ass wear skimpy clothes and dance to insipid droog-like songs from doing just this she has gained over 100 million followers on tick tock with so many of these followers being horny man i'm so [___] horny what's even worse is that most of these tick tock stars haven't even left school but nonetheless this is in turn incentivizing the guys watching to mimic that exact behavior and chase the same dopamine dragon hang on i almost cut the dragon tick tock's design then exploits these young underage teenage girls who are trying to become internet famous by being sexy and honestly it's just disturbing so as tik tok grows these sorts of people are the new role models for teenage girls i mean is it any wonder that doctors on tik tok are telling 12 year olds to get std treatments without their parents knowledge [Music] this is just one of the reasons why studies are now showing the more of these short tic toc style videos you watch the more depressed you become even for active people who exercise regularly being famous used to require having actual talents but now as a result of tiktok the measure of fame for teens is directly proportionate with the volume of tasteless debauchery the algorithm promotes vulgarity has replaced talent the more vulgar and obtrusive the better hello who are you i'm here to help you i can make you rich and famous really you just have to do one thing get naked in front of everybody and worship me does that really work of course it works i will make you extremely wealthy in exchange i need your soul i mean friendship do we have a deal deal thanks to tick tock young people are increasingly buying into the idea that narcissism not fulfillment not meaning not authenticity but narcissism is the ultimate measure of satisfaction and is it really any wonder given the warped and corrosive view that's fed to generation z by tick tock's algorithm but then again that's the least of tick tock's problems because tick tock isn't just depressing and creepy it's neurologically damaging never before have we seen attention spans drop so low it's being reported that many in generation z have had their attention spans reduced to that of a goldfish you would think this girl like her [___] skin is growing onto this phone she never goes anywhere without this phone in her hand and she's always looking at it like she can't talk to anybody for five seconds without looking at her phone checking tick tock i was in a video drought you know the feeling there are videos we watch because you've got to watch something and it's better this than nothing you get starkey long enough and you start drifting back to tinder and snapchat but you know that's not where you belong so you tried this and that some videos get you with fancy graphics and thumbnails and all too often making you feel like you've been robbed of time i couldn't bring myself to go there and with friends and family constantly talking about tik tok i eventually caved and downloaded it it took me over an hour to escape from the most hollow and vacuous videos i wasted so much time watching apes sky shooting sword shotguns and just complete narcissists and in my own experience after watching these videos for hours i would struggle to read a book for more than 15 minutes without getting fidgety and i wasn't the only one having this issue far from it turns out a whole generation of people are now wired into these dopamine sucking videos with the original source of this ugly behavior being tick-tock the way tick-tock works is that it adjusts your mind to demand as much instant pleasure as possible and if you don't believe me just try watching a movie from the 50s 60s or even 70s after going on tick-tock and i reckon in most cases within minutes you'll be wondering when will something happen and this is because tick tock uses social engineering tactics and one of the most effective ones tick tock uses is called intermittent reinforcement you can see intermittent reinforcements most clearly in a casino for example when you use a slot machine you don't win every time or win the same amounts because not only would it cost the casino a ton of money but if you did win every time the excitement and fun of gambling would be lost because when we expect a reward after a certain action we tend to work less for it yet when the timing of the reward or the certainty that we get at all is unpredictable we tend to repeat the behavior with even more enthusiasm if you're going fishing for example and you're on a boat for hours and hours and you finally catch that fish it feels so much better than just buying on the counter this is because we as humans relish the joy of a hard and reward that much more and so in the case of tick tock a video has to capture a user's attention very quickly to cause them to watch the whole thing the video doesn't catch your attention within a couple of seconds it's swiping onto the next one and so after countless videos fail to give you that dopamine rush you will finally find that gem that video you never knew you wanted so badly hey guys i'm here at the minnesota state fair and peppa what are you doing at the minnesota state fair fair only for our attention to last another 30 seconds or so before being hypnotized by the next video over and over this can go on for hours and the scrolling nature of tick tock allows you to watch the first couple of seconds of hundreds of videos occasionally finding that one that gives you that rush of dopamine so when you look at tick tock it's interesting because it is a scroll but they've actually done something new i i want to say in some ways and they have the vertical scroll which is what you have on facebook for example you're scrolling up uh on the news feed but what this does is if you stop on the video and you like that video you now it will res it'll restart that video so in a sense you've got a horizontal scroll going on pleasurable content and you also have a vertical scroll line it will just auto load and you'll just get you'll be in this pleasurable dopamine state carried away it's almost hypnotic you know you'll keep watching and watching and then if you want to scroll up there you go on the traditional scroll again to the next oh you know and there goes that dopamine hit again this is leading to a huge decline in generation z short term memory and attention span which is why take talk serves as an opioid to the masses reducing our mental moral and physical capabilities in return for that sweet dopamine hit oh but i agree i think we have no idea we have no idea what technology is how it's going to impact in the long run we don't have enough of a test case yet right and i can look at my kids in there and just within my little microcosm of my three little dudes their uh sort of their attention span right and their ability to and you can see it impacting you can see it in fact the way that they study the way they learn the way and i i don't think we're you know again i'm not a luddite you know but i don't know that we're doing ourselves any favors right and i don't think there are we're doing ourselves favors either and i don't think there's any way to pull back pulling back from and who's better at social engineering than tech talk's biggest investors the chinese government tick tock's highest ranks are unsurprisingly littered with chinese officials the very same people who have been using silicon valley funded social credit scores to control their population this is just one of the many many reasons the pentagon declared tick tock or cyber threats i think the us military has instructed all personnel to stay off of tick tock you know or not to use tick-tock really yeah again because of the same concern the whole idea is this platform because you know these these companies can argue all they want to that they're independent from the chinese you know authorities but ultimately the chinese authorities knock on their door and say we would like access to your database because we want to Hoover up all the information about every us military person you know that's stationed wherever or you know they're going to do it they're trying to get one of the top tick tock executives in here really yeah interesting it's considered a cyber threat lieutenant colonel robin ocha an army spokeswoman told military.com we do not allow it on government phones there you go look at that cyber threat but take talk turning us into brain dead goldfish consumers it's just one cog within the tick tock cancer because as you become addicted to the app you ignore ticktock's privacy page a privacy page that literally admits to collecting as much data as possible from metadata gps location and pulling all contact information from your facebook instagram and phone but even worse tech talk was caught monitoring what users were typing even when they were typing on different apps so where does all this data go to the chinese government by law tiktok has to provide all the data on its users to the chinese government this is why the amount of user information and data collected by tick tock is much higher than other social networks more teenagers are on tick tock now than use facebook it counts millions and millions and millions of americans as users but it is owned by a chinese company that includes chinese communist party members in leadership and it is required under chinese law to share user data with beijing and tick tick has admitted that it has sent user data to china to put it bluntly this is a major security risks risk for the american people but as the app has been downloaded 165 million times in the us it might be too late for that to matter because if each of these downloads is unique more than half of the american population has already turned over their most sensitive data to the chinese government we already know that sites like facebook and google are free because you the user are the product but even then instagram facebook and twitter they don't collect anywhere near the same amount of data that tiktok does now that i'm trying to hide it like tick tick does they just don't compare because allowing your profile to be mined for targeted ads is a world away from servicing a literal dictatorship committing an untold amount of atrocities and what kind of data is tick-tick collecting as it runs on our phones a heck of a lot more than you would think images of course that users post but tick tick also collects information about the messages that you send about the apps that you use the other apps on your phone it collects the sites that you visit it collects your search history it collects your keystrokes it collects your location data it stores all of this and maybe lots lots more and i can tell you as the father of two small children who already have many of their friends on social media even though they're quite young i find this absolutely horrifying and we know that it's a national security risk since our last hearing on this subject the pentagon the department of state the department of homeland security and the tsa have all banned their employees and service members from using tick-tick on government devices in fact the pentagon even went so far as to say that employees should have their children uninstall tick-tick from their personal devices it was for these exact reasons that the ceo of reddit claimed that tiktok was parasitic the ceo claimed the fact that it's always listening and the fingerprinting technology they use is truly terrifying and i could not bring myself to install that by that on my phone he also added i actively tell people don't install that spyware on your phone but then again maybe sending off your biometric data back to an authoritarian regime is worth it for the high caliber take talkers just shake that ass for joe biden we don't actually like him but what to do just vote blue get trump out of office and start new what's that transient rush of narcissistic fulfillment really worth it for promoting an app that is literally designed to give your data to a country that openly wants to take over the world maybe it is maybe tiktok deserves some credits because the unprecedented psychological changes it's bringing to generation z is truly remarkable it's almost as if tick tick is china's attempt at pushing their propaganda out to the world i mean that would explain why researchers have grown worried that the app could prove to be one of china's most effective weapons in the global information war bringing chinese-style censorship to mainstream us audiences and shaping how they understand real world events the imprisonment of more than a million weakens the corruption of upper level party members pro taiwan pro hong kong pro-tibet movements all of it is censored anything that's a new source must be in line with the version of the world china wants people to see this is because china has caught under the fact that those who control social media algorithms pick the president most powerful people in the world today are the people who are writing the algorithms for twitter and facebook and instagram because they're controlling the spread of information they're literally rewriting people's brains they're programming the culture the day is coming when the politicians realize that these social media platforms are picking the next president the next congressman they're literally picking so if sites like facebook and twitter can influence politics in such a huge way what can a ruthlessly dystopian communist regime do as the analyst ben thompson observed it is conceivable that taytok's algorithm could be changed almost invisibly to promote videos that could help further china's political goals you know for example tiktok could subtly show just two percent more probiotic content than users would usually see and a million of these small nudges could tip things in a direction that is more favorable to beijing's interests this is why china has been pouring a ton of money into getting tick tick widely used through a campaign of paid content creation and marketing because once they got their wide scale buy-in china had free reign china could start growing its cultural influence and it's really really working considering right now tonight a ban on chinese social media apps especially tick tick we're certainly looking at it we've worked on this very issue for a long time would you recommend that people download that app on their phones only if you want your private information in the hands of the chinese communist party the ignorance to tech tick is still pervasive take talk is downloaded thousands of times every hour and the british government continues to allow the owners of tick tick to establish a headquarters in london it just highlights britain's pathetic dependence on china for easy money because in our clown society the desire for cheaper goods is worth more than the price of freedom with all this knowledge out there we still see tick tock use growing exponentially because celebrities governments and the media continue to promote it everywhere you go tick-tock links are dished out and with everyone promoting and trying to get that 15 minutes of fame they crave you will end up feeling like you need to see what's going on because if you've got your friends on there you've got celebrities politicians and the media companies like the bbc promoting tick tock you might feel need to download the app you want to know what everyone's talking about you need to fill that affinity with your peers and that's why there's no discernible backlash against tiktok it's all predicated on conformity we are seeing our minds rot we are becoming so numb with the deluge of entertainment on offer that we have no time or interest in improving our lives no attention span to form our own ideas no care for the existential threat china poses we have to stop watching tik tok videos we have to stop downloading tik tok we have to completely reject this app before it's too late you

Well, damn. Maybe you stubbed your toe first thing in the morning. Or some thoughtless commuter forced you to slam the brakes on the drive to work. Perhaps you're just fed up with it all and feel like sinking to your knees and cursing the heavens.

If you've ever suppressed the urge to unleash a string of obscenities, maybe think again. Some research suggests that it might be a better idea to simply let the filth fly.

Scientifically speaking, a penchant for profanity doesn't seem to be such a bad thing. Studies have shown that swearing relieves stress, dulls the sensation of pain, fosters camaraderie among peers and is linked with traits like verbal fluency, openness and honesty.

And the effects of cursing are physical as well as mental. A 2018 study in Psychology of Sport and Exercise found that letting out a few choice words during a workout can actually make you stronger. In the study, participants who cursed aloud while gripping a hand vise were able to squeeze harder and longer.

Timothy Jay, professor emeritus of psychology at the Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts, thinks that humans partly developed taboo language as an emotional release valve.

"There's a point where it's just more efficient to say, 'F*&^ you,' than it is to hit somebody," adds Jay, a world-renowned expert in cursing. "We've evolved this very efficient way to vent our emotions and convey them to others."

Pain Relief

As anyone who's ever struck their thumb with a hammer can attest, swearing is a pretty common response to pain. But for years, some pain specialists thought that cursing doesn't really help much in those situations. They theorized that swearing might actually have a "catastrophizing" effect, meaning that it prompts people to exaggerate or overstate the severity of pain.

In 2009, researchers from Keele University's School of Psychology in the U.K. set out to study whether swearing alters someone's experience of pain. Based on previous assumptions that swearing was a "maladaptive" response to pain, the scientists guessed that swearing would make pain feel worse.

But, surprisingly, the scientists found that swearing actually increases an individual's pain tolerance. The team tasked 67 undergraduate volunteers with plunging their hands in ice-cold water for as long as they could handle it while repeating a swear word of their choice. Then, they did the experiment again — but this time, the students said a neutral, non-taboo word. The research team found that volunteers were able to keep their hands submerged in the frigid water for longer while repeating the swear word.

In addition, because swearing was accompanied by an increase in heart rate, the scientists think that cursing may trigger an individual's "fight-or-flight" response. They suggest that swearing triggers negative emotions that serve as an alarm bell, alerting someone to danger and sparking an innate defense mechanism.

Damn Honest

Beyond swearing's impacts on the body and mind, research has shown that cursing can influence our social dynamics, too. A 2012 study found that swearing can enhance the effectiveness and persuasiveness of an argument. In addition, cursing can also convey an emotional reaction to something without us resorting to physical violence.

And while many might consider swearing less than savory, a recent study revealed that people who curse often actually lie less and have a higher degree of integrity.

After the scientists surveyed how often participants use profanity, they conducted a series of tests to determine how truthful an individual was. The research team found a positive link between profanity and honesty. Cursing was associated with less deception on an interpersonal level, and higher levels of integrity overall.
